

SOLE Big Questions: What are Big Questions?

Big questions do not have an easy answer, and often lead to more questions. They inspire deep conversations and encourage children to offer theories, work collaboratively, use reason and think critically. Big questions vary; they often tie in with what children are learning at school, come from their everyday experiences, or maybe even something completely new.

Guidelines:

- The answer to the question is not Googleable.
- The answer takes research of some kind, this should not be answerable from your students' minds.
- Cultivates a learner-driven culture of curiosity
- Students' answer the big question by a process of discovery through an invigorated learning environment

Big Question 1: Write your 1st Big Question in the box below.

Describe the student goal of your big question in the box below.

What is the end product idea that students will complete by the of the lesson?

Big Question 2: Write your 2st Big Question in the box below.

Describe the student goal of your big question in the box below.

What is the end product idea that students will complete by the of the lesson?